

Washington, D.C. Detective Solves Crimes in the District of Columbia

MATTHEW ALEXANDER MYSTERY SERIES

When Isis Comes to Dinner: A Play in Three Acts prominently features Lt. Matthew Alexander's wife, Carla and her friend Tracy Jones. Carla's good friend, Maggie Wilson Vincent, is enmeshed in a violent marriage with her abusive husband, Jim Vincent. In an effort to help Maggie, Carla enlists the support of their mutual friend, Tracy, in a risky attempt to help Maggie escape her abusive marriage before something tragic happens. Carla holds a dinner party a week before Christmas to which she invites Marvin Wilson, Maggie's half-brother. Both Carla and Tracy jointly agree that enlisting Marvin to rattle Jim Vincent's cage is the only option left open to them since Maggie refuses to either divorce Jim or press charges against him for physically abusing her. When Isis Comes to Dinner is a play in three acts which depicts the events that unfold during Carla's dinner party for her friend.

Chasing Isfet in the District is the fourth offering in the Matthew Alexander mystery series. It features Lt. Matthew Alexander's wife, Carla Alexander, in a major role for the first time as she tries to rescue her good friend, Maggie Vincent from a violent marriage. However, Chasing Isfet in the District also features Detective Lieutenant Matthew Alexander who refuses to be upstaged by his beautiful wife as he is tasked with solving a double homicide in the Anacostia neighborhood of southeast D.C. Matt Alexander's partner, Sgt. Jake Jackson, also figures prominently in his double homicide investigation not for helping Matt solve the crime, but for refusing to help him. Chasing Isfet in the District takes the reader on an exciting romp through the District of Columbia with all the exciting twists and turns readers have come to expect and enjoy from the Matthew Alexander mystery series.

MEET THE AUTHOR • Barbara Fleming

Like her fictional Hero, Lieutenant Matt Alexander, Barbara Fleming is also an Alumna of Howard University. Barbara lived in the District for ten years. She set her mystery novels in D.C. because she retains fond memories of her Alma Mater and of the multi-cultural urban environment she experienced while living there. Barbara looks forward to publishing more stories involving her handsome young hero, Detective Lieutenant Matthew Alexander, a proud Howard University alumnus who regularly takes care of business in the D.C. Police Department's Homicide Division.
